REUC - OZWELL E. SPENCER PROFILE

RE5 - ALBERT WESKER FILE

This ten year period contains the probable birth date of Ozwell E. Spencer. Descended from European nobility and inheritor of a large fortune, it is Spencer's ambition and personal vision for the future of humanity that triggers the major era of bio-terrorism in the late twentieth century. It was his idea to form Umbrella and he along with his good friend Edward Ashford and James Marcus, would discover the Progenitor Virus during an expedition to Africa in 1966.

"The founder of Umbrella Corporation, Ozwell E. Spencer is a man of noble birth, and together with James Marcus and Edward Ashford, he discovered the Progenitor Virus.

To continue researching the virus as a potential biological weapon, the three created Umbrella Corporation as a front for their activities.

Spencer mercilessly removed rival after rival, continuing to expand his own influence.

With the completion of research on the T-Virus, he seized full control of Umbrella. He never reveals himself or his true intentions even to officers of the company, leaving Spencer a figure shrouded in mystery."

- Transcript of Ozwell E. Spencer Profile.

Spencer was arrogant and power driven. He envisioned the future as a dystopian world with himself at the helm.

“The development of bio-organic weapons was only a means of achieving his true goal – the forced evolution of mankind via viruses. It would be the end of the current form of humanity and the birth of a new, superior human race. With this new race, he would build his Utopia, with himself as a god on Earth.”

RE5 - TRICELL FILE

Travis Trading continues to build strong footholds in Africa. The studies of local fauna would lead to the final stage what would later become Tricell; the Pharmaceuticals Division.

Despite the faked ridicule of the late Henry Travis' expeditions to Africa, not everyone was taken in by the lies.

Ozwell E. Spencer managed to acquire a rare copy of the Natural History Conspectus. He was fascinated by the secrets that lay within its pages, particularly the 'Stairway to the Sun' plant worshipped by the Ndipaya people; a plant that would soon be officially categorised as 'Sonnet Reppe'. He shares his enthusiasm with his friend Edward Ashford, and this is what leads Ashford to begin his research into seeking out the Progenitor Virus in the 1960's.

Travis Trading built a firm foothold in Africa, and beginning in the mid-20th century, they had begun to actively collect samples of plants, animals and insects.

Henry's books were instrumental in guiding these endeavours.

The collected specimens were used in pharmaceutical research, and before long that research brought commercial success and the subsequent founding of Tricell's Pharmaceutical division.

Travis Trading was the basis for the shipping division.

The Natural Resources Development Division was born from the information contained in Henry's journals.

The specimens obtained from African fauna were used to create the Independent Pharmaceuticals Division."

- Extract taken from Tricell File; undated.

"The Travis Family, however, were not the only ones privy to the knowledge of Henry's journal.

Umbrella's founder, Ozwell E. Spencer, was interested in them for the folklore recorded therein. Of particular interest were the accounts of the Ndipaya rituals. Spencer hypothesised that that the flower used in their rituals held significance and this ultimately led to the discovery of the Progenitor Virus."

- Evidence recovered from Tricell File; undated.
